ANTINARCOTIN-EVELOUS WORK.

The Criv of St. Louis has a Sanitarium which is destined to become famous throughout the civilized world. At this Sanitarium men and women are treated for the drug and liquor habit. The stream is a marvelous acientific discovery; in the stream of the excessive user of drugs and liquor is become in the excessive user of drugs and liquor is become in the excessive user of drugs and liquor is become in their praise for their and and painless treatment, which cures them without exercise of will power. Dr. John A. Hull of Lamonte, Mo., writes: "I have been using Morphine for the last forty years until my health was so badiy impaired I could scarcely walk and laid no appetite. I am S years old, and have been gaining a pound a day since my return home, after spending but one week in your Sanitarium. I have been practicing medicine for forty-five years, and this is the only treatment that I know of which permanently cures the excessive user of drugs. With your wonderful treatment the patient is put back into normal condition without pain. To all who know me. I am a living testimonial of the reinvenating effects of your treatment." Dr. Hull write the above October E. 1898, and has never, according to a statement made by him, had one moment's desire for the drug which for so long held him a slave. The treatment is a purely vegetable compound. It not only eliminates all trace of the drug and dispels all distressing symptoms, such as nervousness, weakness, etc., and builds up the entire system. The Antimarcotin Sanitarium is located at 2013 Locus avenue. St. Louis. Any one calling will not only receive a courteous welcome, but at the same time will be given fullest information, or if you send your name and address to Mr. G. H. Kosse, the manager, you will receive a beautiful booklet, giving you the vital principles of this wonderful treatment and women who, through require have friends or accentances who are aufering, they should men and women who, through require have from to constitution. Man Who Has a House Under Brooklyn Bridge "Puts the Law on" the City.

HORSESHOES FALL ON HIS ROOF

And When There Happens to Be a Lull in Horseshoes Other Things Drop-He Insists on Having It Stopped.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

New York, June 8.-William Lemken, own er of the four-story building No. 17 South street, just north of the line of the Brook lyn bridge, has given the timeworn super-stition about horseshoes bringing good luck an extended trial, and he says it is all a driven his tenants out of his store building

Mr. Lemken has "put the law" on the city because of horseshoes. He has begun an action in the Supreme Court against John I. Shea, Commissioner of Bridges, and the entire Municipal Assembly, demanding that they cause to be abated the showering of horseshoes on his South street premises Mr. Lemken bought the South street prop

Mr. Lemken bought the South street property two or three years ago on the supposition that it would rent readily. Perhaps it did at first, but it was not long, according to the papers in the lawsuit, before Mr. Lemken's tenants moved out. They were driven out by the dropping of horseshoes from the bridge roadway overhead.

Other tenants came, and after a few days' experience under the rain of horseshoes.

other tenants came, and after a few days' experience under the rain of horseshoes, nails, sticks and other things, they also moved out. Since then the place has become known as the house where the horseshoes drop.

When the Joke Ended.

At first it seemed like a joke to Mr. Lemken, but when he went down to South street one day and stood on the roof of his building and dodged several horseshoes it wasn't funny any more. He is said to have been driven off the roof by an unusual rain of horseshoes, but perhaps that particular story was exaggerated. It is no exaggeration, however, to relate that Mr. Lemken has grown so tired of the rain of horseshoes that he has sued the city to have Commissioner Shea and the Municipal Assembly restrained from managing and maintaining the New York and Brocklyn bridge.

To hear the people down in South street talk it would seem as if all the horses that cross the north roadway of the bridge slyly wait till they get exactly over Mr. Lemken's store and then kick off a shot, which promptly falls to the roof of the store building. It would also seem that every man who smoked saved up his cigar or cigarette butts and tossed them out of a bridge car just as it reached a spot over No. 173, for Mr. Lemken complains that all such refuse drops on his building "constantily."

Whence De They Come?

such refuse drops on his building "constantly."

Whence Do They Come?

There is no getting away from that assertion. It was put into the papers in the case by Mr. Lemken's lawyer, Archibald C. Shenstone, who has the reputation among his associates of being an exact man in his speech. Mr. Shenstone alleges that "horseshoes, nails, and other pleces of metal, sticks, stones and dirt are permitted by the defendant to fall constantly upon the premises."

Just where the stones which fall on Mr. Lemken's roof come from is another mystery. The other day, when Mr. Lemken's roof come from is another mystery. The other day, when Mr. Lemken couldn't stand it any longer, he went down to South street, gathered up a bagful of horseshoes, nails, hairpins, clear and cigaratte butts, chewing gum, hanan skins, sticks, stones and litter of all kinds, all of which he took to the Corporation Counsel's office, where he offered it as an exhibit in his action against the city.

There is a sallors' boarding-house on the second floor of the building. When a reporter asked one of the truthful-looking sallors about the dropping of horseshoes, he took a bite of plus tobacco and a hitch in his trousers, all in one motion, and said:

"Sure! Wasn't I lyin' in me bed de udder in his trousers, all in one motion, and said:

"Bure! Wasn't I lyin' in me bed de udder night dreamin' o' home an' mudder, an' didn't a horseshee come whiszin troe de hatch an nearly crack me crown. I guess every horse dat crosses de span casts a shoe list when he gits atop of dis here brig."

Mr. Lemken isn't particuair whether Commissioner Shea and the Municipal Assembly move the bridge in order to abate the nuisance, or put on extra inspectors, or attach drip nets to the under side of the bridge. He's bound to have something done about those flying horseshoes, and that's why he has sued the city.

Insisted on Formal Signature to Contract Guaranteeing Her $50 a Month.

BRIDEGROOM WAS PLEASED.

Seemed to Think He Had the Best of the Bargain After All, and Went Happily on Wedding Journey.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Oakland, Cal., June 8.-Six hundred dollars a year spending money for his wife in addition to the usual household expenses, is what it cost aged James P Jones, a San Francisco capitalist, to wed pretty Lorene Viett, a native daughter, whose home is also in San Francisco.

And it was not just an ordinary promise to pay, either, for the contract was ac-knowledged in black and white before the to pay, either, for the contract was acknowledged in black and white before the Justice who performed the marriage ceremeny in the presence of witnesses, and the man of money must put up $150 quarterly under the terms of the agreement.

It was late in the afternoon when James P. Jones, accompanied by the fair girl who was to become his bride, applied to Deputy County Clerk Browning for a marriage license. He gave his age as 58 years, but according to the deputy looked twenty years older. The girl conlessed to 24 summers, but looked to be scarcely 19.

These ages were satisfactory to the deputy, as was the affidavit that neither had in the year last past been divorced, and the necessary legal papers were duly issued. Then Justice Larue of East Oakland was sent for and the weeding party adjourned to the County Clerk's private office to await the coming of the Judge.

When Judge Larue arrived he asked the couple if they were ready to have the ceremony performed.

"Hardly," was the answer of Miss Vlett. "I have a little paper here that must be rigned first." Then she drew one from her chatelaine bag. It was the agreement in which James J. Jones obligated himself to pay his wife $150 quarterly, the first payment to be made immediately after the wedding, the others every third month thereafter.

Jones signed the contract without hesiwedding, the others every third month thereafter.

Jones signed the contract without hesitancy and in the presence of witnesses, and appeared to think that he had, even with that handicap, far the better of the bargain. In the presence of witnesses the acknowledgment was duly made, the wedding ceremony performed and the happy couple took their departure.

"We are going on a brief honeymoon, and Mrs. Jones to the cierk, "and on our return will live in San Francisco.

"Where are we going? Oh, well, that makes no difference. In fact, we have not fully made up our minds, Good-by."

DEMANDS A CONVICTION.

States Attorney Will Resign if Dr. Kennedy Is Not Found Guilty.

New York, June 8.-Assistant District Attorney James W. Osborne, who is prosecuting the case against Doctor Samuel J. Kennedy for the alleged murder of Dolly Reynolds, said to-day that he will resign his position if Kennedy is not convicted by the jury which is now hearing the case.

"I am satisfied of the guilt of Kennedy, and am satisfied that we have proved a ciear case against him." said Mr. Oshorne.
"So satisfied am I, that I tell you now that if he is not convicted I will resign my position."

OUICK WIT MAY SAVE SMALL BOY'S LIFE.

Both Legs Cut Off by Cars, but Passengers Held Arteries Together.

THE LAD'S REMARKABLE GRIT.

Never Whimpered, and Throughout the Journey to a Surgeon Held Fast to His Mother's Money.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 8.-Presence of mind, stout fingers and a fast engine probably saved the life of 12-year-old George

The boy was run over by an engine at the Falls of Schuylkill Station, and both legs cut off. Despite the intense pain he suffered, the little fellow did not faint and bore with remarkable courage the long trip by train and ambulance from the point by train and ambulance from the point where he was injured to the Pennsylvania Hospital. Passengers on the train undoubtedly saved the boy's life by keeping closed the severed arteries.

George, who is a sen of Policeman Frank Hese, left the house to get a $\frac{1}{2}$ bill changed for his mother. After securing the change he was obliged to cross the Reading Railway tracks, and was standing on the platform to wait the passing of a fast freight, when he was drawn under the wheels of the train by the suction, he says. Both feet were severed at the ankles.

A train for Philadelphia had just pulled into the station, and a number of the passingers ran to the little fellow's aid. There was no physician on the train, and it was decided to bring the boy to the city for treatment. His legs were bandaged and he was placed on the train, after the engineer had been notified to make all the speed possible.

The little sufferer was laid carefully on had been notified to make all the speed possible.

The little sufferer was laid carefully on a car seat and two of the passengers prevented the boy from bleeding to death by compressing the arteries. Having no surgical instruments the men used their fingers to stop the flow of blood and succeeded despite the constant joiting of the train.

Although all possible speed was made there were many stops before the train arrived at the Terminal. At each delay the passengers assured the boy that the stop would be momentary and on each occasion the little fellow answered:

"Don't mind me; I'm getting along all right."

right."

Although suffering intensely he never abed a tear and was apparently the least concerned person on the train.

At the first stop a request was telegraphed to the Terminal to have an ambulance in readiness, and when at length the train rolled into the depot it was only the work of a minute to place the boy in the care of the Pennsylvania. Hospital surgeons.

When the little fellow was taken from the ambulance at the hospital one of the physicians noticed that the sufferer held something tightly in one of his hands, and asked what it was.

"It's the change for mother," whispered the boy. "Please give it to her."

Shortly after the operation George talked.

Shortly after the operation George talked calmly to his parents, who had been summoned to the hospital.

The physicians say that the boy's extraordinary pluck and vitality will probably pull him through.
